

What an immigrant tells you — honestly.

Not a political speech. Not a lecture. Just the truth, from both sides.

You love your country. You worry about what it is becoming. And you don't always dare say it — for fear of being judged. We are immigrants, and we say this to you: you have every right to think what you think.

We have met hundreds of French people since our arrival in the Ardèche. Young people, retirees, farmers, elected officials, shopkeepers. And almost all of them, at one point or another, said the same thing to us — often quietly, often after making sure no one was listening.

"We wish every immigrant were like you."

That is not a compliment. It is an expectation. A legitimate expectation that nobody takes seriously. Sur la bonne voie exists precisely to answer it.

WHAT YOU FEEL — AND HAVE THE RIGHT TO FEEL

France has changed. You see it. You live it. Less safety in certain neighborhoods. Public services under pressure. A feeling that your culture, your way of life, your values are sometimes questioned by the very people who come here seeking refuge.

That is not racism. That is not xenophobia. It is common sense. A country cannot welcome an unlimited number of people without organization, without integration, without requirements. And wanting those who come here to respect France — its laws, its culture, its people — is a normal, fair, human demand.

We say this as immigrants: you are right. Unmanaged immigration harms everyone — the French who suffer it, and the serious immigrants who pay the price in terms of image and mistrust.

"France is one of the most extraordinary countries in the world. Being born French is a chance that billions of people never get. That deserves to be protected — and celebrated."

WHAT YOU MAY NOT KNOW

Behind every immigrant, there is a story. Not necessarily dramatic. Not necessarily simple. But a real story, made of difficult decisions, sacrifices, and hope placed in this country.

WHAT MOST FRENCH PEOPLE DON'T KNOW ABOUT THE INTEGRATION JOURNEY

- The asylum administrative process takes on average 12 to 18 months — with no right to work, no certainty, no stable income.
- A rejected asylum claim does not mean the person was not in danger — it often means they didn't have sufficient proof.
- The majority of immigrants want to work and integrate — but the system keeps them waiting for years.

→ Learning French without resources, without classes, without a network — while managing a complex administrative file — takes an effort that few people can imagine.

→ Many immigrants have degrees and skills — but are blocked not by lack of will, but by lack of guidance.

WHAT YOU CAN DO — CONCRETELY

You don't need to be an activist, or change your political opinion. You just need to be yourself — with a little more openness toward the people who came here to build something good.

TALK TO YOUR IMMIGRANT NEIGHBORS

A hello, a conversation at the market. You will be surprised by what you discover when you break the ice.

SHARE YOUR KNOWLEDGE

You know France better than anyone. A piece of advice about paperwork, the neighborhood, local life — it changes everything for someone discovering this country.

JUDGE ACTIONS, NOT ORIGINS

An immigrant who works, who learns French, who respects the rules — deserves the same respect as anyone else.

TALK ABOUT SUR LA BONNE VOIE

If you know an immigrant who is looking for their way — point them toward us. That's all we ask.

WHAT WE PROMISE YOU

Sur la bonne voie does not defend all immigrants unconditionally. We are not a political association. We have no ideological agenda. We only help those who want to do things right — who respect France, who want to work, who learn the language, who integrate with gratitude and not with demands.

Every person we accompany, we tell them clearly: France owes you nothing. It is you who owes France something. And we help them repay it — in their own way, at their own measure, but genuinely.

"We do not want to change France. We want to bring it people who deserve it."

That is our commitment to you — and to this country that welcomed us.
